The Campbell Foundation Funding

The focus of the Campbell Foundation's funding lies in alternative, nontraditional avenues of research that will have direct clinical impact/relevancy to the HIV care/research community within five to seven years. A one-page lay-language Letter of Intent (LOI) is required prior to submission of a full grant proposal. The majority of grant funding falls between the $40,000 to $85,000 range, but the Foundation has co-funded and has provided partial funding for more costly research projects. All organizations accepting funding from the Campbell Foundation agree to provide quarterly status reports including progress and expenditure of funds of the program. Site visits from Foundation staff may be scheduled.

Bill and Melinda Gates:

Diversifying the Pipeline of Product Concepts for an HIV Vaccine

Open Date: August 25, 2010, Closing Date: March 31, 2011

The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation has made major investments in the development of an HIV vaccine. The Collaboration for AIDS Vaccine Discovery (CAVD) initiative, launched by the foundation in 2006, established a new model of collaboration and cooperation in HIV vaccine research. By supporting vaccine discovery consortia that are separately pursuing novel candidate vaccines but linked by a commitment to sharing of data and materials and supported by a common platform of centralized services, the CAVD enables the bold pursuit of novel vaccine concepts in a supportive and enabling environment. The focus of the CAVD has been on translational research, harnessing knowledge to develop new vaccine concepts and to advance the most promising of them to clinical trials.
